

When WEG approached Wilkore to build them a new facility, their specifications were simple: a larger and brighter space. From these Wilkore took the project and ran with it.

It was Wilkore's Managing Director, Michael Wilkinson, who first suggested that this should be more than just your average office / warehouse complex. Wilkore wanted to prove that you can build an innovative and interesting building at a comparable price.

When Wilkore engaged S2F to design the project, the Principal Architect and CEO, Andrew Kings, came up with the idea of building the office and warehouse space all under the one roof.

The building's skylights are also unusual, having been installed into the vertical face rather than the roof, this lets more light into the complex, while minimizing the potential for deterioration due to rain and hail damage.

In the words of S2F's Design Director; "The facade provides a real focus for the facility and ensures that this is one commercial building with real character".

Wilkore were responsible for the design and construction of the building and coordinating between Caribbean Business Park and WEG.

We were able to deliver this project within budget and on time, despite the short timeline and the innovative nature of the design. This project highlights Wilkore's ability to embrace innovation in building design without losing sight of the ultimate goal, which is always to get the job done."
